Soviet "Tough" Policies Apparently In Full Force

By W. A. RYSER
Written For United Press
LONDON (AP)—The ideological dispute that has raged in the top echelon of the Communist Party of Russia since the death of Premier Josef Stalin has led full circle right back to where Stalin left off.

Soviet experts here detect a clear and significant shift toward "tough" policies in every field of Russian endeavor. This is their conclusion based on an analysis of the latest speech of Party Secretary Nikita S. Khrushchev and the new budget presented to the Supreme Soviet last week.

The experts also doubted whether any conciliatory gesture could be expected from the Kremlin on foreign policy.

They noted the apparent continued growth of the authority of Khrushchev as the exponent of the views of the entire presidium of the central committee of the party—that is, the nine men who rule Russia today.

The shift pointed up by the renewed emphasis on heavy industry which was proclaimed both by Khrushchev in a speech to the central committee and Finance Minister Arseny Zverev's announcement of a significant increase in Soviet defense spending.

The new general party line is seen here as meaning the "new course" emphasizing consumer goods production, begun in 1953, is now officially dead and buried.

A combination of reasons is seen for the change. But the main ones are believed to be the necessity of producing more tractors for the gigantic land reclamation program in Kazakhstan and Russia's military and industrial commitments to Red China.

According to official British sources, the size of the Soviet military establishment has not increased during the last 12 months. It is believed, therefore, that the additional money for defense will be used mainly to step up Soviet research and development of special weapons.

The stiffening of the Soviet line in foreign affairs has become more noticeable day by day.

Observers point to Moscow's uncompromising support of Red China on the Formosa question and the violent anti-American campaign in the Soviet press as evidence of this. They expect no let-up either in Europe on the question of Austria and Germany.

No matter how prominent a role some of the members of the party presidium play in the present session of the Supreme Soviet, if it appears evident that the nine top men want to tell the world they are as united as ever.

So far, the entire "collective leadership" has appeared at the sessions of the Supreme Soviet and their names were given in the press in alphabetical order, as usual.

Whatever the intensity of the struggle for power within the Kremlin, no one seems to have suffered seriously from it so far. There is a "new general party line" now. But the men who will carry it out are the same.

Believe Change Will Make It More Difficult For The West

By KENNETH BRODNEY

United Press Staff Correspondent
Moscow Premier, Georgy Malenkov resigned today in a dramatic confession of "guilt" for mishandling Soviet affairs and was replaced by Marshall Nikolai Bulganin.

Then, speaking before the same Supreme Soviet parliament that unanimously approved the shift in leadership, Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov bitterly attacked the West and the "insane notions" of the United States.

The speech appeared to signal a tough new Russian policy toward the West.

"The foreign policies of the imperialists and of the United States above all are aggressive and are leading to a third world war," Molotov said.

In Washington American officials saw the down fall of Malenkov as probably heralding a more dangerous turn in Soviet relations with the West.

Diplomats in London predicted a return to the policies of Stalin, more emphasis on "getting tough" with the West, and closer ties between Moscow and the Chinese Communists.

A second joint session of the Supreme Soviet began convening in snow-swept Moscow at 1 p.m. 8 a.m. EST. A new premier was expected to emerge at this session.

Malenkov sat impassively before the first session while Alexander Petrovich Volkov, chairman of the Soviet of the Union, read Malenkov's statement to the world.

"I ask you to bring to the notice of the Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. my request to the Russian people to elect me chairman of the council of ministers of the U.S.S.R. premiership," Malenkov said.

"My request is due to the necessity of strengthening the leadership of the council of ministers and the need to have at the post, another comrade with greater experience in state work."

Diplomats who had crowded the chamber to hear a foreign policy address by Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov sat stunned.

Even the delegates to the parliament were transfixed. Their eyes of the chunky premier while Volkov read the statement. Malenkov never changed expression.

"I clearly see that the carrying out of the complicated and responsible duties, is being negatively affected by my insufficient experience in local work, and the fact that I did not have occasion, in a ministry or some economic organ, to effect direct guidance of individual branches of national economy."

The news of Malenkov's resignation struck with tremendous impact in the brilliantly illuminated white chamber of the Grand Palace of the Kremlin.

Diplomats in the galleries were openly startled. From all indications, the more than 1,300 deputies of the two houses also were caught by surprise.

Malenkov sat without expression through this great drama.

The reason given for the resignation was his lack of experience in directing the government.

The chubby Soviet leader's statement said he accepted responsibility for faulty direction of Soviet agriculture and stressed the importance of heavy industry in the general development of the economy.

Malenkov was impressive while Volkov's dry voice clipped through the stunning message of his fault. After a moment of stunned immobility, foreign correspondents sprang up in a mad rush to leave the Kremlin.

Malenkov's statement said that beyond doubt "hysterical people" in the West would engage in slanderous speculation about his resignation.

But inasmuch Communists should "ignore such speculations," he said he pledged himself firmly to do his duty at the post which he would be given. He did not specify what the post would be.

The press and diplomatic galleries of the gleaming white chamber were packed in expectation of hearing a foreign policy statement by Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov and perhaps a speech by Malenkov himself.

Instead they received the most stunning news since Stalin died on March 5, 1953: ad Malenkov succeeded him the following day amid scenes of confidence and declarations of unshakable unity.

Malenkov held the office just one month short of two years.

"Insane Notions"
He charged that the United States nourishes "insane notions" of reclaiming Communist countries for capitalism.

The speech by Molotov was significant for the additional reason that he is a long-time friend of the new premier and regarded one of Bulganin's strongest backers.

Molotov's bristling speech appeared to confirm predictions in many foreign capitals that the toppling of Malenkov from power signalled the change of policy and reforms which Malenkov had ordered following the death of the late Josef Stalin.

"In our time," Molotov said, "battle is being joined between two foreign policies: That of peace and that of war."

The announcement of Bulganin's selection as new premier of the Soviet Union was made to the Supreme Soviet only a few hours earlier by Nikita Khrushchev, head of the Soviet Communist Party and considered by many observers to be the most powerful man in Russia today.

Diffusion of Soviet Power
Some Washington officials speculated that the selection of Bulganin might mean a diffusion of Soviet power among several top leaders. This, they said, would be less dangerous to the West and to world peace than concentration of power in one Stalin-like leader.

This view was at variance with the thinking of diplomats and leaders in many other capitals.

Bulganin assumed the highest post in the Soviet Union amid pledges he would return Russia to a policy of emphasis on heavy industries and agricultural development.

Malenkov, in assuming Stalin's mantle, had scrapped those phases of Stalin's policy in favor of stepped-up consumer goods production and a generally "softer" policy than Stalin had imposed.

The dramatic and unexpected resignation came in a four-minute morning session of both houses of the Supreme Soviet.

Approved In Five Minutes
Bulganin's election as his successor, which was almost equally surprising to diplomatic observers, was approved within five minutes of the opening of the afternoon session.

Khrushchev in announcing that Bulganin would be the new premier, told the Supreme Soviet: "We are confident that the government headed by Comrade Nikolai Bulganin will insure the development of heavy industry and at the same time light industry food production and agriculture to an extent that will raise the standard of living of the Soviet people."

Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov or Khrushchev had been considered the most likely successors to Malenkov.

Bulganin became an important figure in Russia after the battle of Moscow in 1941. He gave up his job as chairman of the state bank and managed the "civilian side of the city's defenses."

He rose rapidly after the battle was won and became a politburo candidate in 1946. In 1947 he reached the peak as vice chairman of the council of ministers, in charge of defense.

Over Billion Asked To Aid Huge School Building Program

By JOHN A. GOLDSMITH
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower asked Congress today to authorize $1,120,000,000 in federal grants and loan guarantees to aid the states in carrying out a 7-billion dollar school construction program over the next three years.

In a special message to Congress, he said the program is urgently needed "to give our school children as quickly as possible the classroom rooming they must have."

The President proposed his three-year, building program as an emergency measure to relieve a classroom shortage estimated by federal officials at 340,000 rooms.

"Fundamentally, the remedy lies with the states and their communities," he said. "But the present shortage of classroom rooms requires immediate and effective action that will produce more rapid results."

President's Recommendations
Here are the various kinds of federal aid that the President recommended:

1. An authorization by Congress for an appropriation of 75-million dollars to purchase school bonds issued by local communities. This proposal would apply to communities which are "handicapped in raising bonds at a reasonable interest rate." The White House said it definition of "a reasonable interest rate" would be anything over 3 1/2 per cent.

A federal appropriation of 150-million dollars to match funds put up by individual states to set up school building agencies. These agencies would undertake to build 6-million dollars worth of schools over the next three years, covering the cost with bonds and using the 300-million dollars combined federal-state appropriations to pay the first year's principal and interest.

3. Authorization of an appropriation of 200-million dollars in federal grants-in-aid over the next three years to school districts economically unable to participate in the bonds program supported by the federal government.

4. Appropriation of 5-million dollars to finance long-term planning by the federal government and its states to correct problems confronting public education and particularly, obstacles to local financing and the establishment of more efficient school districts.

Federal Control Backers
Repeatedly in his message, the President pointed out the danger of too much federal control of education.

"Federal aid in a form that tends to lead to federal control of our schools could cripple education for freedom," he said. "In no form can it ever approach the mighty effectiveness of an aroused people. But federal leadership can stimulate the national objective of the best possible education for all our young people will be achieved."

Mr. Eisenhower said his program is essentially a long effort to widen the accepted channels of financing school construction and of increasing materially the flow of private lending, without interference with the responsibility of state and local school systems.

Easy To Win Over Russians

United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (AP)—A Canadian hockey coach has come up with an almost fool-proof method of defeating the Russians at amateur sports.

It's simple: Merely take your top pros and "reintroduce" them as amateurs for the duration of the world championship tournament in question.

In effect, that's what Dick Irvin of the Montreal Canadiens proposed recently as a way to regain the world hockey crown from the mad-skating Russians. Irvin suggested that an all-star team from the National Hockey League be given back its amateur status briefly to bolster Canada's team in the world championship in Germany beginning Feb. 24.

Irvin "nominated" Jean Beliveau and Doug Harvey of Montreal, Gordie Howe and Red Kelly of Detroit and Harry Lumley and Sid Smith of Toronto, all tried and true pros stars Beliveau currently is the leading scorer in the National League.

We Have 'Amateurs' Too
Maybe the U. S. ought to get on the bandwagon. The Russians are making plenty of headway in amateur boxing, but we'd have little to worry about under a deal like that hockey proposal.

We could feed the Russians a few like Rocky Marciano, Jimmy Carter, Archie Moore, Bobo Olson, Johnny Saxton and Sandy Saddler —all "reintroduced" as amateurs for the period of time covering the tournament dates.

Basketball is another big game in Russia. Maybe long George Mikan, retiring king of the pros, could be persuaded to come out of retirement as an "amateur" and rejoin the purified Minneapolis Lakers to guarantee Russia doesn't sweep our world basketball laurels.

If our wrestling supremacy is threatened, how about bringing back Gorgeous George in as aura of sweet amateurism?

Tennis Officials Goofed

If someone in the U. S. Lawn Tennis office had been on his toes, the U. S. could have won back the Davis Cup a long time ago. Jack Kramer and Pancho Gonzalez, as reinstated amateurs, obviously wouldn't have had any trouble with the best of Australia's racquet talent.

None of those proposals is any more fantastic in the eyes of U. S. sports fans than Irvin's suggestion of how to win back the world amateur hockey title with his retired pros from the National Hockey League.

However, the ways of amateur hockey in Canada are completely baffling to uninitiated observers this side of the border.

Chances are they're just as baffled up there about the amateurism of our college football players, some of whom travel in high style in athletic scholarships and "meal money."

And maybe some Canadians wonder how come skater Barbara Ann Scott had to give back her gift automobile to retain her amateur standing and why pole vaulter Bob Richards of the U. S. didn't.

of what's waiting for you in the Super "88" for '55. But only a hint. Because this year's "Rocket"—the exciting the past. We could tell you how it melts away the miles and flattens the hills. Instead, we'll let the "Rocket" do the talking. So come in soon. This "88" for '55 is even

Cherry Corner News

What did we think about this County Championship basketball game at the Carr Gymnasium Saturday Night? Well, it was the kind of game we don't like to pay money to see and never saw one played just like that before.

Gene Cathey's Concord Red Birds five stood back and grinned as Gay Lovin's Hazel Lions held possession of the ball and stood in a huddle over the ball for one whole quarter.

The Redbirds had nothing to worry about as they were eight or nine in the lead and could win just standing and grinning. No excitement, no thrills, just chills.

Thanks to Kirksey Eagles and Lynn Grove Kats for the entertainment they furnished the fans. Several people in this neighborhood have been sick, mumps, colds, and they did not get to see the Red Birds-Lions game Saturday night. They did not miss anything though.

Mrs. Lula Reynolds has returned to her home in Paris after spending two weeks with her sister, Mrs. Easter Hodge and family. She also visited in the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hodge and attended church at Pleasant Valley Church of Christ.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Thompson and Elvin Thompson were visitors of Mrs. Easter Hodge and family Wednesday evening and watched television.

On the sick list this week we have Mrs. Easter Hodge, and Noah Owen with flu and Jane Outland with mumps.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Stubblefield on the arrival of a new baby son, Wonder What Kenny thinks about that baby brother.

Stanley Products representative, Mrs. Elsie Hendon is putting on some parties in this neighborhood. Thanks to the writers good neighbors who helped make the party at her house a success, also thanks to the ones who gave their orders and were not able to attend.

The Wade Roberts' and the Dees Helcombs on the Concord Highway have new televisions. We hear the writer, husband and son, Dale Outland were at the J. H. Churchill Funeral Home Thursday evening to visit with the many relatives of Tom Parker, who passed away in Detroit, Michigan Monday. We also visited in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hill of South 13th Street to Mrs. Ester Parker, sister of Tom Parker.

My memory goes back when we Parker's lived in Arkansas, down next to the Texas border and how we kids roamed the Arkansas hills and valleys and climb saplings. When I went to Uncle Newt's and Aunt Charity's on Saturday to stay until Sunday, but usually I would stay until Monday. Have eaten a good meal in their home. Uncle Newt and Aunt Charity passed away several years ago and sleep now not far from my home. Tom is the first one from that large family of boys and girls to go. Our sympathy goes out to the family.

Tobacco Industry Makes Contribution

MOUNT STERLING, Feb. 7, (AP)—Albert G. Clay, president of the Burley Auction Warehouse Association, revealed today that the Tobacco Industry Research Committee has increased its research funds to $1,000,000.

The sum is twice that pledged last year in an attempt to get the facts regarding tobacco use and health.

Clay said "This million dollars is not ceiling but the minimum support that medical and scientific research can expect from the Tobacco Research Committee."

The committee last year made an initial allocation of $500,000 and pledged additional funds as the need developed.

"The Scientific Advisory Board which is responsible for the research policy and programming has recommended specific grants that now total well over $300,000," Clay said.

He said the additional funds were granted in order that the scientific advisors could more properly plan for further research projects.

Dr. Clarence Cook Little, director of the Racco B. Jackson Memorial Laboratory, Bar Harbor, Maine, and chairman of the advisory board, said the increase would "allow a broad degree of elasticity and adaptability in developing the research program."

He also praised the research committee for allowing the advisory board the "fullest measure of freedom of planning and action."
